Conditions of the Award

The conditions of the Award are:

- The Award shall be made no more than three years after graduation (PhD degree);
- To be awarded in any field - sciences, medicine, arts or humanities - within the purview of the Society;
- The Award to be for work leading to significant advances based on the PhD research as evidenced by published or in press peer-reviewed papers in the national/international literature;
- The work to have been carried out largely in Tasmania or under the aegis of a Tasmanian-based organisation;
- The nationality of the recipient is not to be considered in making the Award; that is, the Award is not restricted to Australian nationals;
- The nominee is developing a career in the field of study;
- The Award is to be available annually, but will not be awarded if there is no candidate of sufficient quality;
- Expressions of interest are to be sought widely from all relevant institutions on an annual basis, and must include a nomination from the candidate's supervisor or Head of Department;
- The recipient will be encouraged to address the Society;
- The value of the Award shall be $1000.

Nomination Process

All applications must include:

- A full academic CV including the date of PhD graduation (which must have been after 16th November 2008);
- An abstract (not more than one page) of the PhD study, including the thesis title;
- One copy of each relevant published or in press paper on which the application is based;
- A letter of nomination from the candidate's PhD supervisor or Head of Department. Applications will not be considered without this document which must include a statement of the new and original contribution to the field of research.
- A copy of the candidate's PhD thesis (to be returned to the candidate).
